JA ZEN-NOH Group

JA is an organization that conducts business activities based on the participation and collective efforts of its members. It collectively purchases the materials necessary for agricultural production and collectively markets agricultural products under the provisions of the Agricultural Cooperative Association Law. It is also involved in a wide range of business enterprises, such as those that provide members with products necessary for daily life; credit services, such as savings accounts and loans; and mutual insurance services that cover life, real estate, and car insurance.

Prefectural-level federations and central unions as well as the national-level federation ensure that these business enterprises at local-level JAs (combined JAs) are conducted efficiently. The entire JA organization is known as the JA Group and encompasses three levels (local-level JAs, prefectural-level JA federations and CHUOKAI (Prefectural Central Union of Agricultural Cooperatives), and the national-level JA federation).

In the marketing and supply businesses, the unification of prefectural-level JA federations and ZEN-NOH continues to advance as part of the reorganization of JA federations. Currently, there are 34 ZEN-NOH Prefectural Headquarters around the country.

The ZEN-NOH Group is responsible for the marketing and supply business of the JA Group and builds structures that make efficient use of various information, technologies, and goods related to marketing and supply. The ZEN-NOH Group is responsible for supplying food products to consumers all across Japan. Amid changes that have brought about a greater degree of market orientation in the business environment in recent years, ZEN-NOH's role in supplying the true richness of life, that is, safety and security, to consumers through food has grown increasingly important. Because it accounts for a major share of food production and supply in Japan, the ZEN-NOH Group will continue to devote itself to fulfilling this purpose.
